Secretary Gray Wins Again in Federal Court; Federal Court Supports Secretary Gray in Denying AI on the Ballot

CHEYENNE, WY – The United States District Court for the District of Wyoming recently entered an order granting Wyoming Secretary of State Chuck Gray's motion to dismiss a lawsuit filed by Victor Miller, which challenged the Wyoming Secretary of State's Office's rejection of Miller's application for nomination for United States Senate. Miller's application was rejected for failure to comply with the ballot name requirements under Wyoming law by listing his ballot name as "Victor." The Office requested the application be resubmitted in conformance with Wyoming law, and that Miller clarify he was a qualified elector, rather than an AI bot.

"I applaud Judge Johnson's ruling dismissing Victor Miller's lawsuit. Both federal and state law are clear: to be a candidate for office, you must be a human being, NOT an AI bot. Listing 'VIC,' 'Victor,' or any other pseudo name on the application does not comply with Wyoming law. I won't tolerate a mockery of our electoral system. We demanded Miller's application be resubmitted to clarify that he is a human being, which he failed to do. Our office is committed to upholding the law."
